

Good day!

We sincerely hope that your Memorial Day weekend was outstanding, and you are well as we start into the summer months. I'm sure you will agree that the last few months have been challenging, and we are all ready to get back to some sense of regularity.

The team at Front Range Fire Rescue (FRFR) has been working on our next steps for re-opening, and today I am happy to share them with you. Starting on June 1, our offices will once again be open to the public. This means that permit pick up, plans drop-offs, and car seat checks will be starting again. We ask that anyone who needs to visit our facilities respect social distancing and the wearing of a mask inside. Additionally, all of our administrative staff will be back to working in the office on our regular schedule. Lastly, you will start to see our crews on the street and outside, doing more hands-on training as well as fire inspections and building visits. We had limited practice sessions to one fire station at a time, rather than training with multiple units, in our efforts to maintain social distancing.

Because of our continued concern regarding COVID-19, we will not be having large groups for public education events or performing blood pressure checks at our senior centers. We will update you when these types of events start again.

I am so proud of the men and women at FRFR for their hard work and diligence over the last few months. This crisis has tested us. We have proven to be creative and resilient. There is no doubt that the future will bring us more challenges. I am confident that our members will continue to rise to the occasion in the face of our next calamity, whatever may come. Thank you so much for your support!

Sincerely,

Michael West

Fire Chief
